This section is optional and can be used to provide a summary of recommendations to the IT manager regarding which controls and/or compliance best practices Botium Toys needs to implement, based on the risk posed if not implemented in a timely manner.

Recommendations:

- Botium Toys has big security problems. There is no least privilege, no disaster recovery plan, and no separation of duties. This makes it easy for insider threats or system downtime to happen.
- Start using least privilege with role-based access control (RBAC) now to limit who can see data. This will help stop risks of someone getting too much access.
- Make and test a disaster recovery plan (DRP) with backups stored in another location. This will keep the business running if there's a cyber attack or system failure.

- Use separation of duties to stop fraud in payments. Don't let one person approve transactions alone.
- Add an intrusion detection system (IDS) with the firewall to watch for network threats in real time.
- Set up automatic, encrypted backups and check them often to protect against data loss from ransomware or hardware problems.
- Put antivirus or EDR software on all devices, especially old systems, to find malware automatically and reduce manual work.
- Use encryption for data when it's stored and when it's sent, like full-disk encryption and HTTPS, to keep credit card and personal data safe for PCI DSS and GDPR rules.
- For PCI DSS, only let approved people access credit card data and encrypt all transaction points to avoid fines or data leaks.
- For GDPR, make a plan to report breaches in 72 hours and do a data inventory to protect EU customers' privacy and avoid penalties.
